Developments in Motivational Interviewing – how have these affected practice?

Document Version
Final published version

Link to publication record in Manchester Research Explorer

Citation for published version (APA):
Atkinson, C. (2017). Developments in Motivational Interviewing – how have these affected practice? In Manchester Manchester Interviewing Network

Published in:
Manchester Manchester Interviewing Network

Citing this paper
Please note that where the full-text provided on Manchester Research Explorer is the Author Accepted Manuscript or Proof version this may differ from the final Published version. If citing, it is advised that you check and use the publisher’s definitive version.

General rights
Copyright and moral rights for the publications made accessible in the Research Explorer are retained by the authors and/or other copyright owners and it is a condition of accessing publications that users recognise and abide by the legal requirements associated with these rights.

Takedown policy
If you believe that this document breaches copyright please refer to the University of Manchester’s Takedown Procedures [http://man.ac.uk/04Y6Bo] or contact uml.scholarlycommunications@manchester.ac.uk providing relevant details, so we can investigate your claim.
Developments in Motivational Interviewing – how have these affected practice?

Dr Cathy Atkinson
Manchester Motivational Interviewing Network
22 June 2017

cathy.atkinson@manchester.ac.uk
History of MI

• Emerged initially from William Miller’s interactions with Norwegian psychologists specialising in alcohol problems

• First appearance of MI within academic literature in 1983

• Miller then collaborated with Stephen Rollnick to produce Motivational Interview: Preparing People to Change Addictive Behaviour
“Motivational Interviewing is a person-centred counselling style for addressing the common problem of ambivalence about change”

(Miller & Rollnick, 2012, p.29)
The evolution of MI
The Transtheoretical Model (TTM)
Ten things that MI is not (Miller & Rollnick, 2009)

• Distanced MI from the TTM
• “TTM is intended to provide a comprehensive conceptual model of how and why changes occur, whereas MI is a specific clinical method to enhance personal motivation for change” (p.130)
• Placed much greater focus on the spirit of MI
The Spirit of MI

1991 - not defined
2002 - autonomy, collaboration, evocation
Processes of MI

- Engaging
- Focusing
- Evoking
- Planning
Skills of MI - OARS

- Open-ended questions
- Affirmations
- Reflections
- Summaries

Change talk

statements by the client revealing consideration of, or motivation for change
Effectiveness/efficacy of MI

- Number of randomised trials approaching 750
- Evidence of efficacy across wide range of domains
- Lots of evidence that it works… attention beginning to focus on how
Mechanisms for change

Therapist behaviours
- Empathy
- MI Spirit
- Reflections
- Open questions
- MI consistent/inconsistent practice

Client behaviours
- Change talk
- Sustain talk
- Self-efficacy
- Self-monitoring
- Stage of change
- Motivation
- Planning

Client behaviours
- Therapeutic alliance
- Commitment strength
- Perceived behavioural control

Assessing proficiency and the Motivational Interviewing Treatment Integrity (MITI) scale

• Allows robust judgements about proficient practice
• Provides opportunities for practitioner development
But…

• Hard to assess
• Hard to achieve proficient practice ("MI is not easy" – Miller & Rollnick, 2009)
• Proficiency on MITI not significantly correlated with client evaluations (Madson et al, 2016)
• Constantly changing – developments to MITI reflect theoretical instability
So where does this leave us as practitioners?

- How are we understanding and using MI within an range of diverse applied contexts?
- Which aspects and elements of MI guide our practice?
- Is there anything which would help us understand or use MI more effectively?
Survey link:

- https://mmu.eu.qualtrics.com/jfe/form/SV_7TL3PfdmFBS2CRT